

The Nation's First Healthy Lifestyle Center Just for Kids!

EQUIPMENT

IS DESIGNED

EXCLUSIVELY

FOR KIDS

 Aerobic/ Kick Boxing
 Energetic 45-Minute Supervised Circuit Training Hip Hop for Fitness Classes

Nutrition Workshops Jump Rope • Ballet

Sports Agility

WOW!

ALSO GREAT FOR BIRTHDAY PARTIES

EW FOR FALL: ZUMBA

PROGRAMS FOR ALL KIDS 5 - 16 YEARS OLD

ONE MONTH WITH 6 MONTH MEMBERSHIP

AN ORTHODOX UNION TESHUVA PROGRAM

83 COLUMBIA AVENUE, CEDARHURST VISIT US AT FITWIZE4KIDS.COM

Letters

Continued from Page Four

The person in charge explained to me what causes this. He said that they calibrate their scales on Friday afternoon. Since, he continued, they have to rush home for Shabbos they don't have time to make sure that their scales are accurately calibrated.

AARON M. BERNSTEIN

Singles stay home

To the Editor:

ועשית הישר והטו

To the Editor:

I read Etta Chinskey's article (Long Island's Singles Go West; August 28 2009) and sympathizely is more pressure on religious singles to marry at a young age than secular singles. After all, "pru urvu" (be fruitful and multiply) is the first mirzobi in the Turah in the Turah. the first mitzvah in the Torah.

I am a married West Sider and observed the West Side become the capital city for Orthodox singles from all over the world. However, I would discourage Orthodox singles from moving to the West Side.

In this community of singles there is a lot of Hachnosos Orchim [hospitality]. My friends and I host many singles for Shabos and Yom Tov, hoping that they will meet their bashert at the Shabbos table, but it rarely happens. There is lots of camanaderie and socializing among singles but these friendships usually do not end in marriage. The singles feel very comfortable on the West Side because it's a community of singles and a way of life but they do not necessarily move to the next stage. This comfort zone is and I host many singles for Shab do not necessarily move to the next stage. This comfort zone is almost a deterrent to marriage and singles who wish to marry might be better served by living in a neighborhood where there is pressure to marry.

KARIN FELDHAMER

NCYI reevaluated

To the Editor

To the Editor:

My admiration to Mr.

Jonathan Bell for his courage and insight calling for the reevaluation of a National Council of Young Israel and Orthodox Union merger (Letter to the Editor; Sept. 4, 2009), realizing that the NCYI is no longer what it was. With NCYIs abolition of delegate meetings as well as regional and national conventions, the Council is no longer accountable to its membership and in turn, its member synagogues. Adding the National Council's irrelevancy on the social and political scene, is all no longer what it was. With the more reason to seek a merger with the OU.

with the OU.

Some 18 or 19 years ago, at the behest of the president of the
Orthodox Union, my father, Rabbi
Ephraim Sturm, was asked to prepare a position paper for an OU/NCYI merger. The plan had a hope a thick plate for joint and phases which called for joint ventures, followed by a merger of the lesser departments with the larger departments of the other, and departments of the other, and then, the final phases of unity. Since the Council's then-president rejected the paper outright, there was no need for an OU response. Today unity is much more diffi-cult. The NCTI's excellent financial cocities with utilizer of challers in position with millions of dollars in position with millions of dollars in the bank gives it a negative incen-tive to merge. However, Mr. Bell may be successful in abolishing the Council's mandate of branch dues in favor of the OU's position of free synagogue affiliation and individual (not synagogue) volun-tary membership dues. This can tary membership dues. This can be achieved by a strong leader or be achieved by a strong leader or core group encouraged by a groundswell response of the Young Israel membership. Other-wise Mr. Bell's courageous obser-vation will be just a cry in the wilderness of indifference wilderness of indifference. AVA STURM STRAUSS

Parsha responses

To the Editor:

I very much enjoyed Rabbi Billet's article on Shiluach Hakan ("Baby birds and their mothers' August 28 2009). His words beau August 28 2009). His words beau-tifully articulate the issues I have had with understanding this mitz-vah for years. I have no ready answer for you except that at the very least it seems to me that if you don't need the eggs/baby birds leave the nest alone. But I am not sure that I am correct. More sen-ritise minds then mine disease. stive minds than mine disagree.
ELLIOT GOLDOFSKY MD

To the Editor: I don't know if I have a "good answer" to the questions posed by Rabbi Billet (Baby Birds and Their Rabbi Billet (Baby Birds and Their Mother; August 28 2009), but I do have a different perspective. Rabbi Billet concludes that shiluach haken (the law requiring sending the mother away before taking eggs or young birds from a nest) cannot be based on compassion to animals because the Mish nah (Berachot 5:3) states, "One nah (Berachot 5:3) states, "One who says (in prayer) Your mercy is demonstrated through the treatment of the mother bird' is to be silenced." But the Talmud (Berachot 33b) gives two possible reasons why this prayer may be objectionable. One interpretation tionable. One interpretation (which Rabbi Billet accepts) is that the prayer suggests that G-d's laws are based in mercy rather than fiat.

are based in mercy rather than hat.

The other interpretation is quite the opposite — that the prayer is objectionable because it implies that G-d is more merciful to one species than another. Maimonides (Guide For The Perplexed 3:48) accepts this latter interpretation, because Mai. interpretation, because Maimonides argues that all Torah commandments have reas commandments have reasons (note Bamidbar Rabbah 19:6 says that G-d revealed the reason for the Red Heifer to Moses). Rabbi Billet's more powerful point is that it would have been more merciful to forbid disturbing the nest altogether (see Ikkar Tosafot Yom Tov on Berachot 5:3). But sometimes the Torah 5:3). But sometimes the Torah limits its demands on humanity, knowing that our capabilities are limited (see Maimonides, Guide 3:22, discussing why G-d com-mands animal sacrifice when the practice has many troubling theo-logical implications). Many (e.g. Rav Kook) have argued that the very permission to eat meat is a divine concession to human needs. Perhaps G-d made a judg-ment that requiring shiluach haken, rather than asking for the nest to be left alone, would be the best way to get the most compassionate behavior out of the most number of people.

RABBI NOAH GRADOFSKY

■ WOODMERE

WED., SEPTEMBER 16, 2009 | 8:00 PM

YOUNG ISRAEL OF WOODMERE 859 Peninsula Boulevard, Woodmere, NY 11598

Reflect with us on our community's priorities for the year 5770, and study with us the Torah's requirement of integrity in our public and private lives.

Rav Aharon Kahn Professor of Talmud and Codes, RIETS, Yeshiva University

Charles Harary, Esq. First Vice President of Residential Operations and Legal Counsel, RXR Realty Moderator: Rabbi Steven Weil Executive Vice President, Orthodox Union

■ FLORIDA

TUES., SEPTEMBER 22, 2009 | 8:00 PM

BOCA RATON SYNAGOGUE 7900 Montoya Circle, Boca Raton, FL 33433

Rabbi Steven Weil Executive Vice President, Orthodox Union Rabbi Cary Friedman Consultant, FBI Behavioral Science Unit Moderator: Rabbi Efrem Goldberg Rabbi, Boca Raton Synagogue

MANHATTAN

WED., SEPTEMBER 23, 2009 | 8:00 PM

THE JEWISH CENTER 131 West 86th Street, New York, NY 10024

Rav Hershel Schachter Rosh Kollel, RIETS, Yeshiva University; Halachic Consultant, OU Kosher Dr. David Pelcovitz Professor of Psychology and Jewish Education, Yeshiva University Moderator: Rabbi Steven Weil Executive Vice President, Orthodox Union

For further information, call 212.613.8149

Watch for announcements of future programs around the country.

TO ADVERTISE IN THE THE JEWISH STAR CALL 516-632-5205 X. 4